When re-hard banding, the new bands should not be located over the top of any existing hard banding. The existing hard banding shall be completely removed by gouging, grinding, or another suitable technique.

After the removal of the old hard banding the area shall be ground to a smooth bright metal finish and the surface shall be examined by wet magnetic particle inspection (MPI) to ensure the complete removal of any cracks. If the depth of the resultant groove is too great for hard banding, a buttering layer of mild steel weld metal may be deposited. This layer may be subjected to machining prior to hard banding.

Worn hard banding need not be removed prior to re-hard banding provided the wear resistant alloy overlay to be applied is the same as the existing wear resistant alloy overlay and no cracking of the existing overlay exists.

The hard bands shall be applied in the following manner:

a. Drill Pipe Tool joints
